

Nara's Pharmaceutical Manufacturers and Products on the "Kampo Mecca Project"

Some businesses in Nara have been making medicine continuously for over 700 years. This link with history remains firmly maintained to the present day.

In addition, thanks to research on the benefits of traditional medicine, new medicine production methods have gradually been implemented. This has allowed new products such as health supplements and cosmetics to be developed, and a selection of these manufacturers and their products are introduced in the following pages.

orakichi Yasuda, founder of the company that is now in its third generation, first started a medicine distribution business, and later expanded into the production of medicine. He formed a new company in 1935 focusing on exports, and in 1944 the organization was changed following the national policy of the time. A new company was incorporated following the lifting of restrictions in 1947, which has continued to this day.

<Company's comment>

Company founder Taichi Nakayama was known as the Cosmetic King of the East. Pursuing good cosmetics suitable for the skin of Japanese women, he sold Club Araiko (washing powder) which turned out to be a big hit. Over a century has passed since then, and the company's "quality first" policy remains unchanged. Currently, the company is engaged in everything from planning and development to manufacturing and sales, and looks to serve the various needs of our customers.

<Company's comment>

We produce and sell Sankogan, a Wakan (traditional Japanese) digestive medicine. The origin of this medicine dates to about 700 years ago. It is said that the name "Sankogan" was given by the Emperor Godaigo in the 14th century. At our Sankogan Museum of Pharmacy, visitors can learn free of charge about Kampo and traditional medicine from Nara.

<Company' s comment>

Stanley Pharm started in Nipponbashi, Osaka, as a wholesaler dealing mainly in the natural ingredients for medicines. It also had a shop called the “Yamato Pharmacy” which sold Daranisuke-gan, Wakan and Kampo medicines, health foods and more. Today, it is based in Ikoma City, Nara, and engaged in developing and selling products with natural ingredients such as the leaves of Tendai-uyaku (lindera) and Yamato toki (angelica).
